

Book Jacket Assignment

What kind of information is included on a book jacket?

The saying goes, “Never judge a book by its cover.” But, book covers serve a very important role in marketing a book for sale. Publishers carefully select cover images in order to entice readers to pick up a book and buy it. The book jacket also includes an enticing synopsis of the book (much like a movie trailer) that gives the reader enough information without giving too much away. The book jacket will also include a brief biography about the author to give even more information about the person behind the book as well as quotes from key publications in order to convince the reader that the book is worth reading.

5 Tips for Creating an Effective Book Cover

- An effective book cover reveals key elements about character, setting, theme, conflict, symbols, and more. Focus on the most appealing element of the book and find an eye-catching way to represent it on the cover.
- Think like a reader. What would a reader pick up? What does the reader want to see? Put it on the cover. The audience is the most important factor when creating an effective book cover. Different audiences will respond to different images and fonts.
- Avoid stereotypical images, words, and phrases. For example, if a book is about how to budget money, a cliché image would be a piggy bank. Think of a different way to catch the reader’s attention that is unique and original.
- Portray the main message of the book in a concise and distinctive way through a combination of words and images.
- Set a clear, powerful, and relevant tone through colors, font choices, diction, and imagery. For example, a book about World War II will have a different tone than a book about the history of bubble gum, and the tone of the cover should convey that tone in an effective way.

Task

For the assignment, you will create a book jacket for a book of your choice (at your appropriate reading level). You will include:

1. An effective cover that conveys key elements through images, words and tone. Create a cover that is different from the original cover. Make a purposeful decision about fonts. Colors, words, and images that appeal to the book’s specific audience.
2. A synopsis of the book on the inside flap that teases the reader to want to read more. Synopsis needs to be written by you. Summarize the beginning of the story. What is the situation? What is the conflict? What is the setting?
3. A biography of the author on the back of the jacket. Write your own brief biography of the author to include any details from the author’s life relevant to the story and/or any other significant works by the same author.
4. Quotes from publications to market the book. Research 1-2 quotations from real life publications about the book and include these in effective places on the book jacket.

Your book jacket should fit onto your book. You will wrap your book jacket around your book to submit for grading. The book jacket should be polished, professional product. The text should be typed, and images should be high-quality.
